Goodbye Brother"

>"Goodbye Brother..."By: N. G. Silver >Adaptation from Saffir's last moments of life

> "You should listen to what Saffir has to say Diamond." Stated Tuxedo Mask after adverting Black Lady's attack. I thought for that moment about the look of >sincerity on Saffir's eyes as he spoke to me of Wiseman's treachery.
I will hear him speak.
> "Wiseman..." was all my brother had to say before an energy blast flew past me. In a scream of intense pain Saffir fell to the ground as the blast tore through >his body. I spin around as fast as I could to find Wiseman floating behind me. "I do >not need permission to kill traitors." He says. I look back at Saffir just as he began to get back up onto his knees. But >before he could say anything else Wiseman shot another energy blast at him. "DIE!" "Saffir!" I yell in horror as I watch my brother die in extreme pain. It >was a most horrid sight, one that would be implanted in my memory for all eternity. Wiseman took the key card that Saffir had stolen and then said before he >and Black Lady vanished, "Foolish Saffir, letting himself be deceived by the SailorScouts." > I look over at the Sailor Scouts and Tuxedo Mask as they ran toward Saffir.They too were in shock at the death of my brother. Had my brother truly become >friends with them? I then looked at Saffir, his eyes shut, lying on the ground dead. His >bandages that covered his forehead fell off as I stared. His Black Moon insignia had vanished! He was human?

> I remembered back to a time when we both lived happily together before our exile to Nemesis. He would look up to me, his big brother, his big blue eyes wide >as can be. He was a carefree child. That same look I remember from that day on Nemesis when we found that flower. He looked up at me with hope in his eyes of >peace with the Moon Kingdom. I was thinking of revenge the whole time. Had my total devotion to our revenge for our exile brought this upon him?
>Had I changed his ways, only for him to return to the earth and find a peace with those I sought to destroy? Was it my fault for not protecting him like I should >have? Am I to blame? "No Saffir, don't die!" Sailor Moon cries out, "Please, remember Prisma." > Sailor Moon was wishing for Saffir to live. He HAD found peace with them. Perhaps my idea of revenge was all wrong. Perhaps Saffir was right.
> The Sailor Scouts looked up at me as I knelt down and picked my brother up into my arms. "Diamond." Sailor Moon said as I turned and began to walk away.
> I looked down at my brother's face one last time. His handsome young look was gone, in its place was a worn down and bruised one. His Black Moon was gone.
> What person could have killed such an innocent like Saffir? What wrong had he done, but to want peace between us and them? Only someone truly evil could have >done such a thing. A hatred brewed inside me, one that kept on building the more I thought of >Saffir's death and his murderer, Wiseman. Wiseman had killed Saffir, and now he will pay.
> Saffir, I will avenge your death. Wiseman will NOT get away with what he has done to you. Even if you were a traitor, he had no right to kill my brother.
>He had no right to kill you! "WISEMAN!" I said in all my hatred as I disappeared from the Sailor Scout's >sight.
> "...The truth is, I've always loved you." I said with a failing breath as I tried to place my hand upon Sailor Moon's face. A tear ran down her cheek as she >held tight to my hand, placing it on her smooth skin. "A tear for me?" I said before I felt my life fading away. I lost control >of my arm and it fell to my side out of Sailor Moon's grasp. "Diamond." Sailor Moon cried out with tears in her eyes.

> Perhaps the great beings of the universe have granted me this one last chance to finish something I had started. My eyes close and I am left with one last >thought.
> Good Bye Brother...
